An "elite" parable:

During my early university days, I fell very ill. I could not play sports or really keep up with many of my friends. My favorite place in the world quickly became the library and I went deeper into its depth and read engineering, math and science books. 🧵

While my peers and even most of my superior were ignorant of the things I learnt, I kept going deeper and isolating myself more and more.

It became difficult to take people seriously, especially as I watched them become confused at trivial things. Troubling, even my own teachers.

I always assumed as a child that those ranked above you know more than you. Those with more authority than you surely had earnt it.

I assumed... if it was written down, surely it must have passed peer review and was true.

I slowly began to doubt the value of the things I learnt.

Sadly, I was too slow. Unwittingly, I had absorbed a great deal of evil. Almost every piece of science I absorbed was a prod towards nihilism, towards a massive constructed lie. Away from God and away from the truth, disguised as enlightenment but instead the demiurge's prison.

Having absorbed the implications of the Copenhagen interpretation, I began to question the value of life itself. I stopped hanging around my friends and worked more on the math aspect of these models and ideas I assumed were a perfect reflection of the truth. I dug very deeply.

Then, there was one fateful day when I was alone in the library and a flash of my probable future went through my head. I was horrified at what awaited me, but was confused as what to do, so I prayed to God for guidance & help. The first thing I did was decide to change my path.

Deciding to stop thinking of "unenlighted" human beings as "others", and abandoning my thirst for more "knowledge" from the poisoned well I thirsted for, I wrapped up my studies and went into the world. I wanted to obtain a different kind of wisdom: my own life experiences.

My prayers were somewhat answered, my health restored to the point where I could hang out with friends (who became numerous too). I learn more in this time than my time in the library.
Though I was surrounded by contradictions, I tamed my stubbornness and tried to make most of it

Being a top student afforded me many great opportunities, which I took. I worked... but the gravity of the library always pulled me back.
I had many questions.
I began to doubt the answers too.
Something wasn't right.
What I saw and experienced, did not match what was written.

Revisiting the history of science revealed many impossibilities. The Schrodinger equation was not derived but "guessed". The basis of "experimental verification" for QED was indirect... It was intimidating but I decided to take a Bayesian approach to knowledge...

...and almost completely discard everything I thought I knew.

Despite what they taught us, there was only ONE TRUTH.

Everything that contradicted itself, could not be true.

It's better to admit you're a huge baka who doesn't know the answer than to "know" an outright LIE.

It's better to be wrong sometimes, rather than consistently wrong and to FORCE yourself to be right through institutions.

It's better to defer answers to questions we can never know to God than to allow the demiurge's schizophrenics to dictate the McTruth to us.

My time in the library proved not to be a waste. With my new attitude I quickly began to navigate the lies and found MANY MANY people discarded by history, who also came to the same conclusions.

The majority of people don't know who they are.
I make it my mission to change that.

You can give yourself a pat on the back if you don't believe in a million genders, but this is a low hanging fruit.

The depth of the lies go far deeper than it appears. And for every lie, another more clownishly ridiculous lie awaits those without good priors [e.g. flatheads].

As the Global Anglosaxon Empire (GAE) collapses, there is a danger that the elite's poisons they have been storing seep into the body of the new world to come. I am already seeing this, with Malthusianism, global warming and what not being accepted as an unquestionable truth.

"Do not be afraid of those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather, be afraid of the One who can destroy both soul and body in hell." Matt10:28

These historical lies destroy minds. They have destroyed the minds of the "elite" and have lead them all to satanism.

This is my super LAME declaration of war against the GAE "elite": I will target their sacred cows. Darwinism, the big bang, things that will surprise you.

Not only will they suffer a bodily death, but their souls will be plunged to hell where they belong.

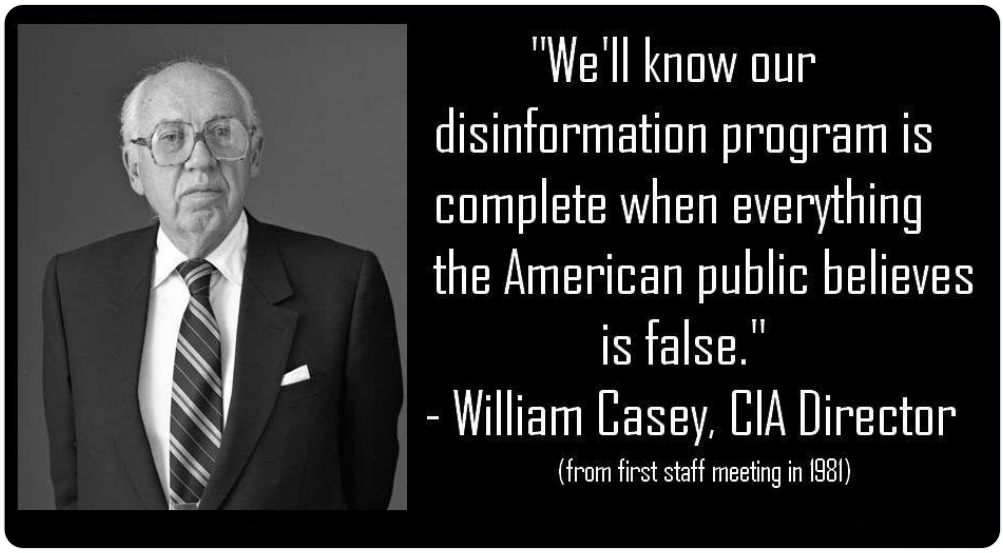
For the elite reading this: It's not too late to change your satanic ways!
Laugh at me all you want, I've beaten all your peers in your institutions. I've seen further than you can ever dream to. And almost everything you were sold was a lie.
Perhaps, laugh at yourself as I did.

You see, we were the real bakas! We assumed that we were born into a world controlled by God, but in fact it is a planet dominated by satan. And satan's minions may know a lot of the truth, but that knowledge gives people too much control. So everything must be an inverted lie:



I know that we will succeed, because people will always prefer the truth to a lie.
People will always prefer beauty to ugliness.
People always prefer the light to darkness.
They must completely destroy your mind to invert any of these natural urges. And for many people they have.

So please join me! And start voicing your confusion with all the crap around you and don't limit it to the most obvious stuff like a trillion genders and people identifying as attack helicopter.
Start with something like "why do the planets stay in orbit in a gravity only model"

It's better to be temporarily wrong and look like a fool than to just accept a huge structured lie. You'd be surprised how far we go! Let's all become bakas together & shed the poison of GAE and all its forms! Thank you for reading this far, friends, I value all of you.
