Have you heard of the concept of "True Name"?

Let's start with Finnish mythology:
"If you know the birth of something it gives you the power to reverse it, & gain control over it"

This idea occurs ALL OVER THE WORLD, but you probably have never heard of it. Neither had I... / 🧵

The golden Thaler by Magedeburger is one of the most elusive coins for gold coin collectors.
Why?
The "Thaler" is the origin of the word, "dollar". It is the origin of the dollar sign ($), and has "NU 21" inscribed on it.
This is the most powerful and evil symbol in the word.

"Hey let's worship YHWH's snake on a stick ($) and sacrifice all of our future children to a fake economy, and satanic ideologies like feminism, free love, anti-historical human behaviour and see what happens"

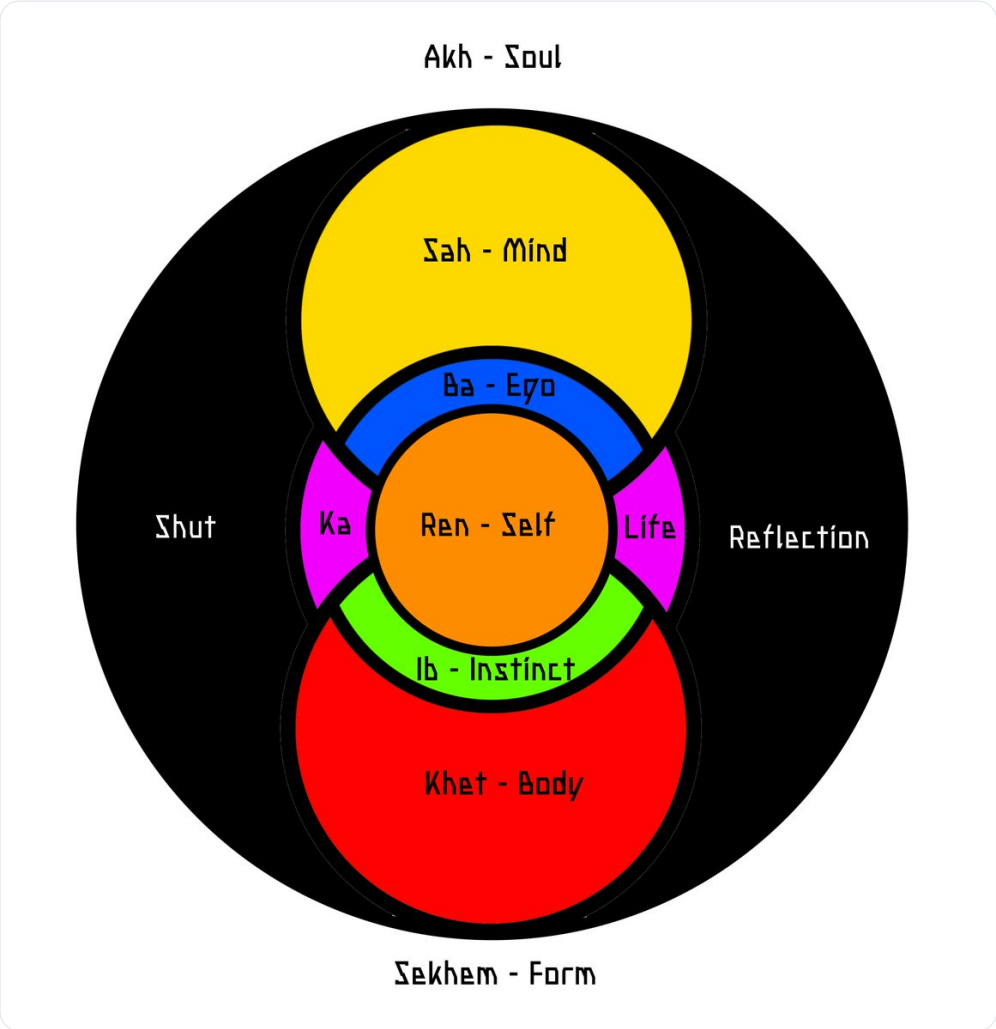
In Egypt, everyone is believe to have multiple parts:

Khet = "physical body"
Sah = "spiritual body"
Ren = "name, identity"
Ba = "personality"
Ka = "double" or "vital essence"

If you destroyed everyone's Ren, their Ka would disappear. They also had something similar to Finns.



The Jewish orthodox have a similar concept:
Bal-Shem, are magicians, and it translates to: "Master of Names".

It's for this and other reason some (e.g. Martin Luther) doubt the canonicity of the book of Revelations over 2:17 where this "spell" is attributed to Jesus.

In Japanese Kotodama 言霊 (i.e. word spirit), you gain power over things by knowing their true names.
In fact, it is one of the very ancient names of Japan:
言霊の幸わう国
kototama no sakiwau kuni

i.e. The land where the mysterious workings of language bring bliss.

In Japan, there is a common myth of the spirit of language called kotodama (言霊); a belief that some divine power resides in the Japanese language.

All of these are variants of Eliade's "origin as power".
The concept is, if you know the origin, or "birth" (as the Finns put it), of something, then you have its true power in your hand.
That means to maintain that exclusive power, it's important to HIDE that origin from others.

This discussion of names may seem silly to you. But I will make it very practical in an instant:

Imagine you did not originate from a literal history society (as we do), but from an oral history.
Names suddenly completely define something, and some must be uttered in secret.

Why? Because someone who wishes to gain power over history can simply reverse, invert, mix the names.

You might think we are not susceptible to such magic. You are wrong. It simply comes in the form of science overwriting history.
Let's take a look at the "Cheddar man" hoax.

Cheddar Man: Mesolithic Britain's blue-eyed boy

By Kerry Lotzof

Ancient DNA from Cheddar Man, a Mesolithic skeleton discovered in 1903 at Gough's Cave in Cheddar Gorge, Somerset, has helped Museum scientists paint a portrait of one of the oldest modern humans in Britain.

Cheddar Man lived around 10,000 years ago and is the oldest almost complete skeleton of our species, Homo sapiens, ever found in Britain.

Explore human evolution

Museum science is helping to answer where, when and how humans evolved.

The science behind the

This was a skull they found somewhere, dated (likely fraudulently), and then decided the person who had that skull MUST have had black skin.

Why? Because for 1000 years, a certain tribe has been trying to render us (❔) extinct, through these reversals.

Debunking Cheddar Man

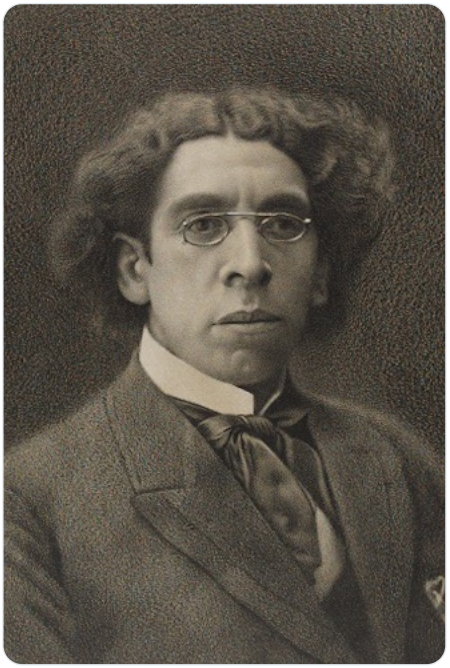
If you can convince Britons that their skin was originally black, then they might have no trouble throwing away their species purity and mixing with invading hordes from Africa and central Asia.

The power of origin, is still the PRIMARY power for those who are not pneumatic.



For those lucky enough to be pneumatic (autistic? XD), there's nothing anyone can speak to you in words that can invert the truth. You just simply know it, through ancestral memory or other manners.

For wordcels, watch out for the true name and the origin as power. /End
