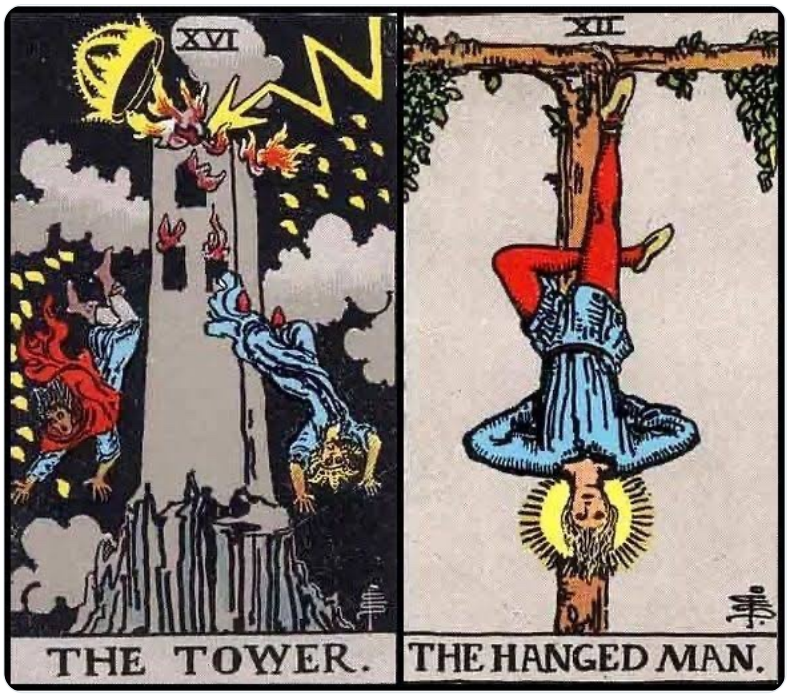
What did the Israeli art students mean by this?
Who was Gelatin and E-Team? /🧵

(bonus thread of clues to thank you all for your support)



What was the B-Thing and why were they allowed to punch a hole through the tower to "film" something?

What else did these guys do to the floor they were on, which matched the “collision” floor? What were all those boxes for?

As for the other Israeli art students, what's up with how well they line up with the collision? Just what kind of art were these two groups up to?

Finally, can a criminal psychologist make sense of these two diagrams, one with "deep-ression inside" and "amazement outside"?
And how about the small box with the "deepest thoughts" at the bottom of the basement?

Finally, for someone who purchased the limited edition $500 “art book”, who tried to shill against me years ago:

Can you explain to me just exactly was the art form at the end of this work?
Ironically, you have ALL already seen it.

I won’t answer these questions now.

They will have to await my final thread.
Until next time oomfies, we will return to regular threads. Next time on Twitter Ball Z.
