General comment that doesn't target anyone who follows my account who hasn't blocked me:
It's sadly very common with older people to retain vast amounts of useful and specific knowledge that is entirely outdated and irrelevant. / 🧵

They tend to interject with some authority, and try to control those younger than them under the guise of "leading" or "reprimanding".
I'm not talking about morals here but practical and political matters.

It's sad because they would otherwise play a supportive role, if they would only open their eyes up to change.
Just because you're old doesn't mean you have to live with and be burdened by the past — it is an active choice to be like that.

War has changed. There's absolutely no value to citation of LOAC.
The way nations got around nuclear blackmail is to use measures short of war.

This includes “mercenary groups” and black operations.
This is not an aberration but the norm.
Some people are incapable of visualising this, because they spent their youth in the 60-80s and never understood the direction was took by 4GW.

It would be fine if they kept to themselves but they’re ever so eager to interject and twist the arms of those who would speak up.

Needless to say, for those like this, I don’t appreciate you.

My mind is free from constraints not due to speculation but experiences and knowledge of my own.

The world you grew up with no longer exists.
You can choose to live in the real world or reminisce about the past.

Personally? My focus is always about the future, 5GW, which is why I’m on here, winning the war that hasn’t truly begun yet.

These people’s minds are solidified and lost their plasticity. I will never be like this, and the young always have my attention.
Thank you for yours./End
