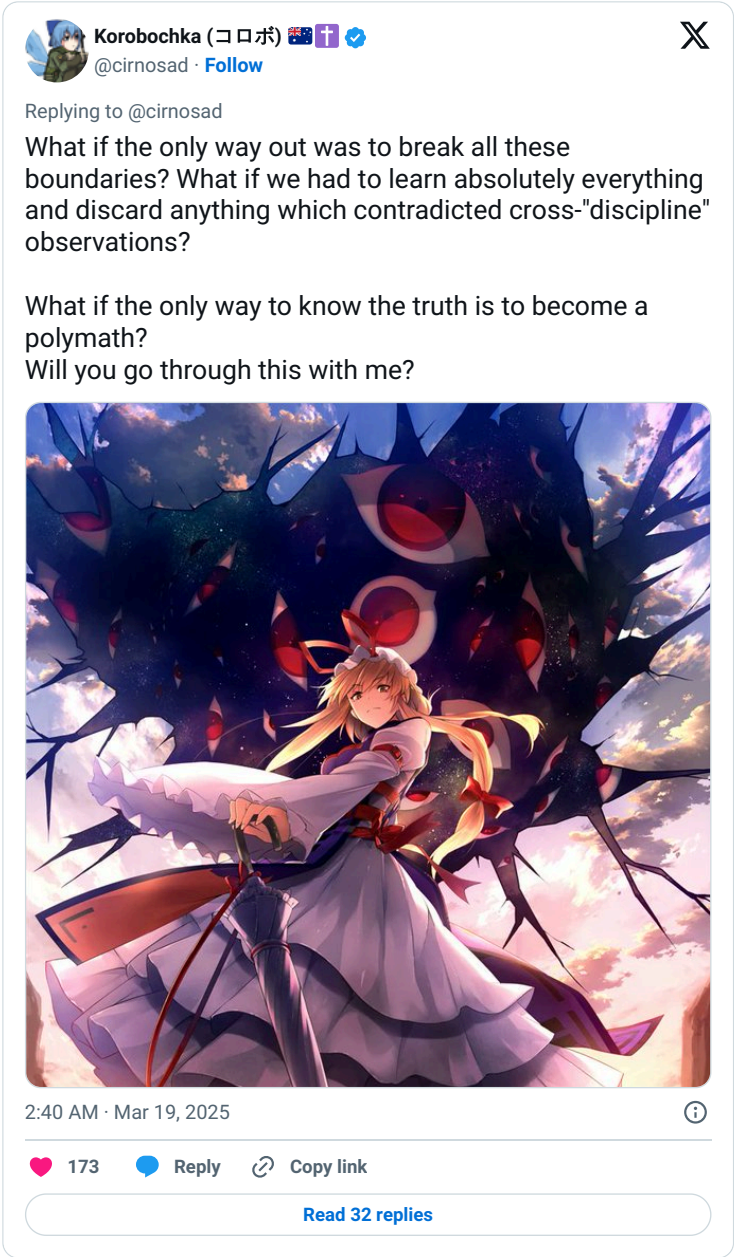
At some point, when I was writing back in May, I paused to reflect on the subject.
I realised something that sent a shiver down my spine.
My entire life I've been vertically integrating my knowledge for a reason I couldn't articulate: I joked about taking over the whole world./ 🧵

I know everything from cosmic processes, all the way down to nuclear processes and every single thing in between.
I thought for a while it was a gift from God.
Then I realised the truth that this was the norm, for any intellectual, in fact not doing so was considered unhygienic!

The reason is everything appears to be a scale-free phenomenon, to a degree that will shock you.
I promise you that you will also have this insight.

And then I realised I WILL take over the world.
But it won't be me alone, but everyone taking over the world with me. Together.
You're all going to be like me.
You're all going to become Polymaths in such a short time and at such a great scale it will shock you.
Once you're deep in the fight you'll probably even forget about me, and that's fine.
We're all one. Each of us are all.



It probably sounds childish, impossible. How can a silly and sh*tposting Twitterite hope to do such a thing.

I won't, you all will, and everyone beyond you.
We will break this system and shatter it to a degree that it can never be rebuilt again.
The true Apocalypse is near! /End

I'm not a mercenary. I want to change the world. In fact I want to take over the world. But to do that I need money (resources) and most importantly an army...
... But not just any army.
I need an army of my own.
