Tr

Korobochka (コロボ) 🇦🇺✝️ @cirnosad

Nov 29, 2024 · 3 tweets · cirnosad/status/1862519957827067939

I need more rest but I need to let you guys know what's happening in Syria. The situation is urgent. /📄

🇸🇾🇷🇺🇮🇷/🇮🇱🇹🇷🇸🇦🇺🇸

I warned last month that Israel would go after Assad next. What's happening right now is the worst case scenario. Turkey is invading Syria using terrorists and mercenaries from central Asian nations.

The exact same attack on Hezbollah's communication equipment by Israel was just repeated by terrorist factions/Turkey. Many Syrian soldiers deployed at the front were wounded. This means Israel's direct involvement is confirmed.

The attack on Syria happened the same day as the fake ceasefire issued between the fake Lebanese regime and Israel -- which has already completely evaporated and turned into an Israel victory and re-occupation of South Lebanon.

Minutes ago, the terrorist factions re-entered Aleppo, which saw a violent war, followed by 8 years of precarious peace. The Syrian army was demobilised over the last two years, making remobilisation efforts very difficult. Russia is busy in Ukraine. Hezbollah cannot fill the gaps anymore because they are pinned down. That leaves largely demobilised and ineffective Iraqi factions.

This is not going to end well for Syria unless something changes. In the absolute worst case it may have to choose whether it will defend Aleppo or Damascus. This is because we will also see an attack soon from the Druze factions in Sweida. Furthermore, we should expect to see a war waged on Armenia to cut it off from the Iranian border to keep the Iranians preoccupied. Masses of US transport planes were seen departing Alaska 18 hours ago, these are probably carrying supplies for a very long campaign.

Worst of all, now that the terrorists have been reactivated in Syria, Israel can disguise high level assassinations -- and pin them on "terrorist factions", that it is openly collaborating with. There's no doubt the CIA/Mossad/etc. have been collecting as much intelligence as possible to make this possible.

Few options exist now. The Iranians are still talking about nuclear deals while the world map changes. The Russians are drag racing with missiles while their allies fall one by one.

What could have and should have been done years ago may now be out of reach, only a massive escalation can change the game. Gaza bought Syria one more year of peace. It remains to be seen how well Assad has used this time. Let's hope the Syrian army and its allies have a lot of surprises for their enemies.

Remember what I told you years ago, WW3 started in Syria and will end in Syria. The fight the resistance axis faces now is far more difficult, but it's not a fight they can afford to lose -- because they are at the back of the wall now and will be eradicated should they fail. A cornered cat is the most dangerous animal.

God bless Syria, victory to the SAA! 🇸🇾

Manpower issues aside, what can the Russians do to help Syria?

The war in Ukraine has seen Russia enter the 21st century in terms of smart munitions, ISR and tight OODA loops. The Russians were consistently bad at close-air support in the Syrian campaign and their bombs had a CEP of something that seemed like 100 meters at times.

Now the Russians can bomb just as well as the Americans can, can action intelligence almost as quickly as Americans can and can certainly have drones up in the air collecting intelligence whenever there is action going on.

The situation for Russia isn't quite the same as 2020 where Turkey employed MALE/drones and surprised them and the Syrian army.

Can the Russians surprise us here? I sure hope so.

God bless the Russian armed forces. 🇷🇺 Victory to Russia.

What are the dark forces going to do differently in Syria?

After Gaza, their chemical weapon false flags are not going to find a willing audience. To be honest though this is no longer necessary. State actors like Turkey and Ukraine are already involved directly in Syria.

Turkey is on the ground providing air support, logistical support, even training and recruitment. It is gathering all the terrorists in the world from high TFR (~3.2) countries in central Asia, which have excess manpower. For all intents and purposes, they have infinite man power and are completely radicalised and have no other hope in the world other than drugs and satanic jihad.

Israel has completely degraded Syria's air defense system which is hanging on by a thread. This opens it to massive attacks by the extremely dangerous Turkish air force alongside Israel and the United States. The rumoured Iranian systems never materialised and even if they did, don't seem to be active.

Just as Russia learnt from the war in Ukraine, the Americans too learnt what makes Russia tick. They may have left some lessons unutilised until now.
We saw attacks on Toropets and early warning systems with no response by Russia. We even saw an Israeli air strike on Hamimeh, Russia's air base in Syria.

We might see a full scale strike and destruction of Hamimeh at the most important moment of the war, potentially a nuclear strike, with the gamble that if Russia failed to respond in its own territory, it's unlikely to respond. In fact, they would have the perfect cover for this: Ukraine.

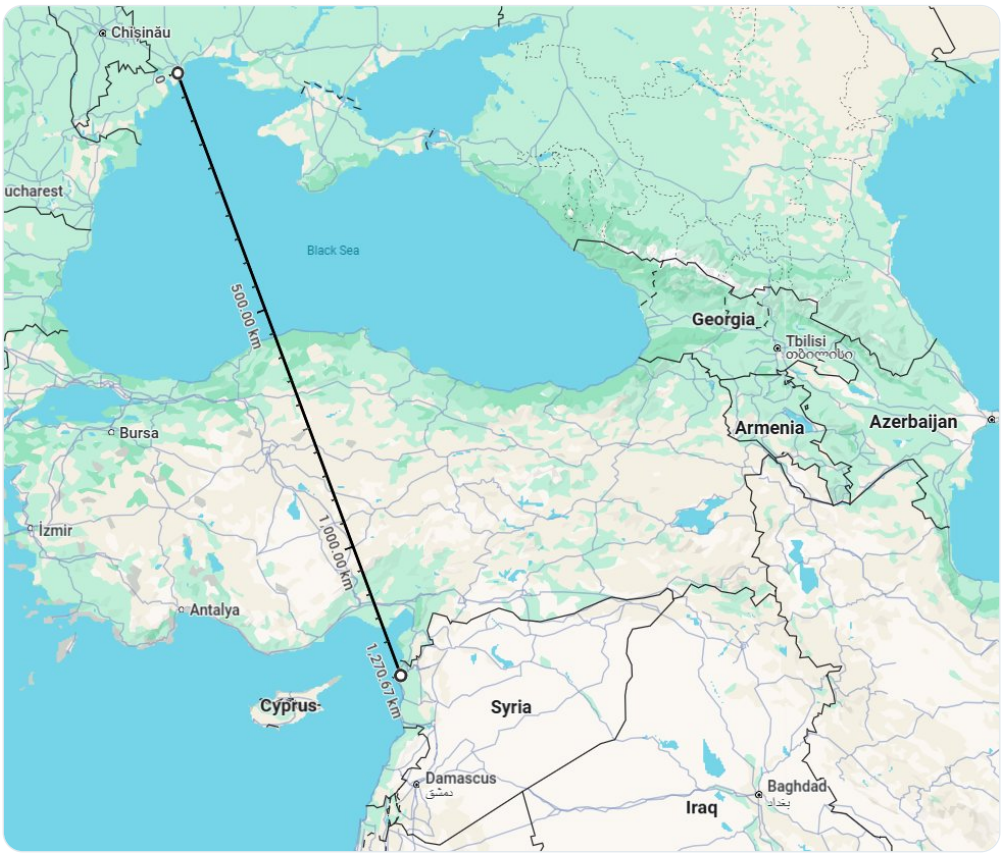
With provisioning of long range cruise missiles such as Tomahawk (nuclear capable) missiles, Ukraine can strike Hamimeh from anywhere north of Odessa. It's important not to discount this possibility. These missiles will pass over Turkey which will not shoot them down in coordination with NATO.

But Russia will surely have a response and some surprises of its own. Turkey cannot hide behind NATO while undermining Russia's very existence and only naval lifeline out side of the Black sea. The fall of Syria means the fall of Russia. It also intersects with Iran, Lebanon, and Israel. The US as well, has its interests in the middle east and has clawed away Syrian land and resources without justification -- it fully intends to hold on to these.

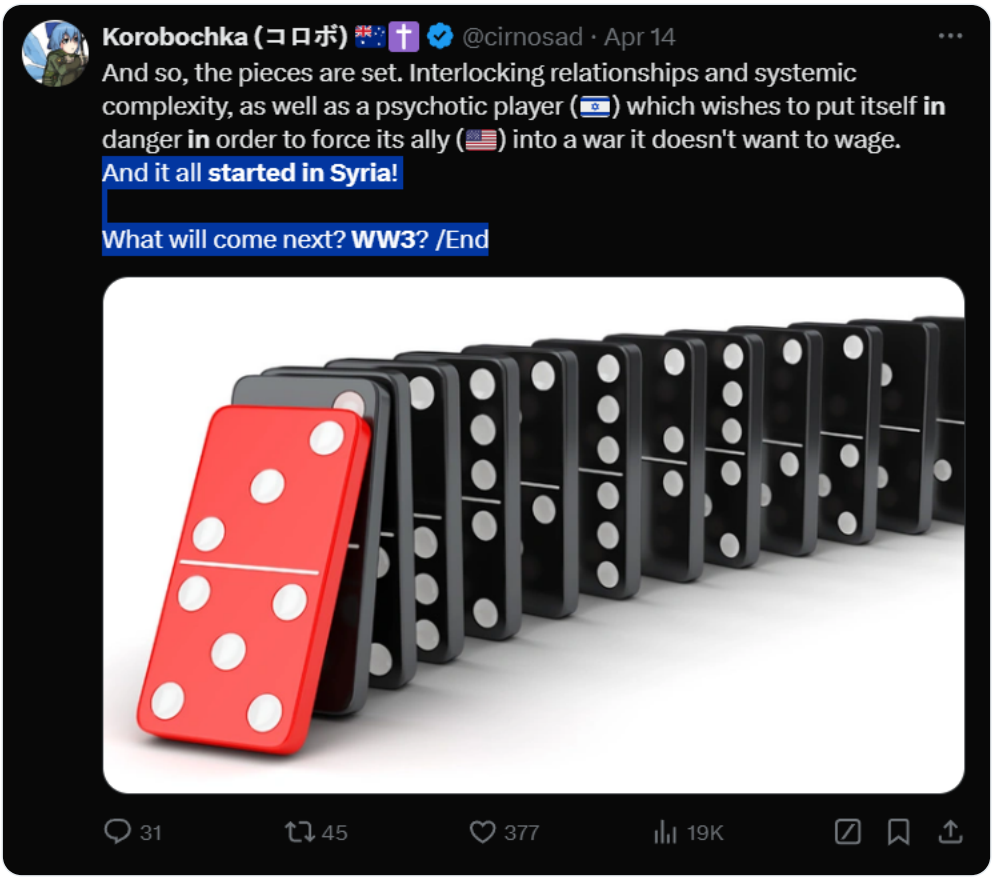
This is not the same battlefield, the borders have melted away, the actors have all chosen their sides. What you're witnessing right now is nothing short of a third world war, exactly as I warned.

May the Satanists fall and may this be their end.

/End



Chișinău
ucharest
Black Sea
500.00 km
Georgia
Tbilisi
Armenia
Azerbaijan
Bursa
İzmir
1,000.00 km
Antalya
1,270.67 km
Cyprus
Syria
Damascus
Baghdad
Iraq



Korobochka (コロボ)
@cirnosad · Apr 14
And so, the pieces are set. Interlocking relationships and systemic complexity, as well as a psychotic player ( ) which wishes to put itself in danger in order to force its ally ( ) into a war it doesn't want to wage.
And it all started in Syria!
What will come next? WW3? /End
31
45
377
19K

...