What's wrong with the wifejak meme and why are wifeguys such cringelords?

Why does it evoke such a primal rage in real men and a defensive reaction among low-T white knights?
Most importantly, what is the true and dark purpose behind it?

It's actually a much more important question than it appears to be on the surface. So important that shill commentators on the "right" launched an impressive gay-defamation campaign against Nick Fuentes to try and salvage it. They have failed, but the risk this meme represents still lingers. I believe by fully dissecting this meme we can unravel their intent and make the whole thing backfire through counter-subversive awareness.

I will trust that by now, you have come to accept that this wifejak meme is astroturfed. It is not organic! It was flooded on image boards, a sh*tcoin was made around it and major accounts who push pro-regime narratives from the "right" pushed it in unison and forced it down our throats. Nevertheless, I will demonstrate that it indeed could only be an astroturfed meme.

What the hell is this meme and what is in it for the regime?

As strange as it may sound, this wifejak meme is homosexual in nature, reflecting the state of all relationships that are allowable in the west. The intent is to sell this onto a generation that has so far rejected participation in relationships, and by overcoming this "hesitation", giving them stakes in a system that has largely lost them. They need men because a massive war is coming and recruitment numbers have plummeted to almost nothing for white men, whom they wish to render extinct.

This probably confuses you or sounds like a huge leap or stretch -- how could this possibly be related to a silly doodle, right? Is Korobochka finally losing it after covering way too many wars? If this is you, you MUST read this megathread to its conclusion.

To make this conclusion water-tight we must understand the origin of this meme and what that entails: what has been imbued within it by its creator -- who actually had nothing to do with the PSYOP associated with it!

Then, to understand the risk it represents, I must explain what memes truly are. You know the name, you kind of know what they make you feel, but you probably don't quite understand what they truly do and how they're made. I don't want to get too deep into human psychological models, but some understanding of them is absolutely necessary to truly dissect the meme and the PSYOP behind it.

To put it all together, I'll explain the ultimate goal behind this meme and how it's connected to global state power and our current collapsing rates of fertility. This meme is actually proof of a strong disconnect by state actors, I believe it not only failed but actually BACKFIRED. As such, this thread may very well inform them and allow them to calibrate their next attack -- this was one of my concerns!

Yet, should this thread receive sufficient distribution among other meme warriors, we may exploit the holes left behind by it and take so much ground that the enemy will have brand new problems on their hands. With this in mind, don't forget to RT and share, not only this tweet but all to follow, and share across all networks available to you.

So sit back, relax and enjoy this mega-thread by your trusty shrine maiden hunter, Korobochka. ❄️

Origin of the Wifejak meme

Let's begin with the meme itself, as understanding how this meme was developed and dissecting it carefully will give us insight into what it truly represents.

Wojak, formerly widely known as "feels guy" first appeared on a Polish image board back in 2009.
It was often used to express wistful or melancholic feelings towards a particular subject, often paired with "tfw" or (that face when). This expressive meme was often used for commentary about our current dark situation and the feeling of helplessness towards it.

The format was perfect -- and the wojaks mutated, into countless other memes adaptable to different personality types, situations, often bad stereotypes of people. One of my favorites are the soyjaks, which are becoming their own category of memes.
The meme itself is just a bunch of dark strokes on a white background, but our brain miraculously associates it with an emotion without requiring prior contact or memory with it. Humans fill details in from their past experiences and artistic expression of said details requires both empathetic observation and introspectiveness. It is a natural meme and this is why it became so popular!

People who mutate memes will render other expressions, situations or truths, imbuing a bit of themselves in their creations in the process, or using their power of empathy to imbue bits of others in it! It's from observation and creation that memes are born, and artistic expression and imagination -- as well as freedom to render such things -- is the lifeblood of image board culture that dominates all of modern internet society.

There is one particular, and rare, form of wojak that represents something that is the complete inverse of the feels wojak. If you've never used image boards, you have probably never encountered the following unnerving meme, the sociopath wojak:

When this meme is usually dropped on image boards, it represents some dramatic and inhuman realization that upturns assumptions within the thread. Sometimes it's just someone LARPing as a sociopath who is either enjoying sadistic pleasure out of an unfortunate situation or exercising absolutely no empathy towards a subject!

Ironically, creating this artistic work did require empathy from its artist, as it is excellently portrayed in the eyes of the observe -- it is meant to be unnerving. This could not have been drawn by a sociopath! It would require at least empathy or introspection -- and sociopaths lack that.

The rarity of this meme is due to the nature of memes, which actually do require empathy -- even through expression of violence/destruction and so on. You have to know what your target will feel and calibrate the meme to get a rise out of them. Most of the time indifference itself is expressed as strength by people making memes, not sociopathy, as they wouldn't project anything but strength on their stoic position. Furthermore, one of the hallmarks of a sociopath is lacking the self-realisation that they are a sociopath. They will usually project themselves onto the most convenient prototype instead -- ultimately revealing a contradiction in the eyes of the viewer in the process, killing their memes.

After all, memes and good art are an expression of the truth, or multiple levels of irony towards it -- a lie rarely propagates well as it requires manual intervention to do so, and is far more difficult to express in art that is to become popular.

I guess the question is what happens when a sociopath decides to draw themselves? Well, you probably already know the answer...

Throughout history, homosexuality has been treated as a form of mental disorder, or demonic possession. The DSM-I, issued by the American Psychiatrist Association in 1952, listed it as a sociopathic personality disorder and ego-dystonic. With the JFK assassination and the LBJ administration taking over followed by the civil rights act of 1964, the homosexuals quickly got this clinical definition somewhat changed -- the sociopathic definition was dropped for political reasons, but the ego-dystonic one remained until 1987 when psychiatrists finally caved into the demands of homosexuals who began dominating all forms of society. Today you cannot cross a street without stepping on some kind of homosexual gang sign in the form of a rainbow flag.

Moving on, what does ego-dystonic mean? This is someone whose thoughts, self-expression and emotions (their ego) are all in dissonance with one another. They have conflicting feelings, and are driven away from expressing them by feelings of shame -- often caused by trauma early in life. As such, their self-image is in contradiction with what they think they should be from a natural perspective. This is because they are unable to introspect as it would bring them great pain during memory recall -- which is ultimately why they never realize their true and natural sexual order. It is thus obvious to conclude that they are also unable to empathize with others as it requires an understanding of one's self, which is why the two definitions were used in conjunction with each other as they are in comorbidity.

What does this have to do with wifejak? Well... wifejak was made years ago by a Lesbian

Looking at the meme Ava drew, you cannot help but feel unnerved by it. There is this almost blank expression, neither smiling nor frowning. There is immense dissonance in this drawing and knowing the empty stare of a female sociopath, it seems to align with what is expressed here.

Wifejak is a female sociopath, a self portrait of a homosexual.

This is why it never really spread on image boards. This meme doesn't represents ANYTHING or any expression. It cannot be used to draw attention to any dramatic situation. Essentially it is a high-entropy nothing expression, which cannot interact with any information or scenario that the typical image board forum goer would encounter. You see, to be on an image board, and to truly enjoy it, you must have an image editor open. You can copy other memes, mutate them and then inject your own take on things, inserting the characters into recent news or stereotypical situations often for comedic effect or to get a rise out of people.

But... how the hell can you use wifejak? How is it relatable to the average image board user, who is usually someone unhappy with the state? Obviously, it is not a meme that can spread there for that purpose. In order to spread it, you must force the meme -- astroturf it.

Compare wifejak to the tomboy/enbie meme used on /pol/, disparaging globohomo:

Needless to say, you can see a lot of hilarious expressions here! This piece of art came from someone who can empathize with each of the characters (look at the dark lord sweating!) and even created this hilarious portrayal of global gayification of the women they desire through a "tomboy indoctrination machine".

Let's move on to the purpose of this meme and how it all fell apart when image board goers, namely groypers, found it and broke it along with the people posting it.

In the post-COVID era, three particular trends emerged which grabbed the attention of the regime:

The first trend was recruitment targets being consistently missed, resulting in a rapidly shrinking and undermaintained US, UK and other western military forces.

The main vector for recruitment numbers caving in were white men: White men are refusing to die for the state which has largely rejected their wants and needs, then imprisoned them in a society that hates them. Hilariously, Israel of all states, expressed concerned about this fact!

The second trend which has absolutely alarmed the regime is the collapsing male participation rate, which is actually most pronounced among white straight men. The most useful people in terms of monetary contribution. Left unchecked, this will cause societal collapse by the end of this decade as key infrastructure maintenance and skilled construction jobs remain unfillable. In a world war scenario, this means certain defeat before it even begins.

A keen-eyed analyst will observe that this decline began a few years after the civil rights act passed in the United States and accelerated after homosexuals dominated US politics. Of course, a redditor will claim that correlation is not causation but I trust my readers are smarter than that and can process this information independently.

The third trend, and ultimately the cause of the former two trends, is men checking out of relationships, especially young men. In a curiously coagulated survey from 2022, pew research quotes the number of "single adults" not looking for a relationship at 57% -- a catastrophic figure.

When you dig into other surveys and more recently information, you can see it's a lot worse than this. 63% of young men are single -- most have never been in a relationship, and now the majority do not want to be in a "relationship" with a "modern woman".

Throughout human history, and specifically in ancient Roman times, this was the last warning sign before a full-scale and irreversible societal collapse. Though women have created a stupid "incel" meme, the data shows somewhat of an inverse of this -- the majority of men are voluntarily rejecting a "relationship" (not sex) with women. This has rendered the majority of women relationcels, but I digress.

This trend gives men no stake in society. You will leave no progeny behind. You can only look forward to dying alone and being surrounded by gay propaganda and infinite migrants from all over the world. Ironically, these two are connected as I will show you in the conclusion.

What's important to note and as many media articles have stated: Men have checked out of society. The biggest question I will answer, is why. Why are men resisting the most irresistible attraction in the world, the attraction to women? You already know, but you may be surprised at how counterintuitive the state of things are towards it. The common insult women (and the regime) throw at such men is to accuse them of being gay. This is in fact what they tried to tarnish Nick Fuentes with. It's actually quite the opposite.

In any case, with a massive war on the horizon and adversaries who have proven to be far more resilient than they predicted, they're trying to reel us back in but face an impossible barrier. A barrier that was in fact erected by the very foundations of the Manchurian regime we live under!

Their latest and cringeist attempt is the wifejak meme, but it's important to look at other attempts to decode what they really want us to think and how they would like to change our behaviour: the tradwife or born again virgin.

Confidence wavers as critical U.S. ally expresses concern in readiness of armed forces to provide military assistance when called upon

Rather than being an image board meme, the tradwife meme was a sort of cosplay by women today -- feigning submissiveness. One of the most attractive quality in a woman next to purity and beauty.

They would dress up as stereotypical 50s "home makers", who themselves were ironically cosplayers of a bygone era. With divorces burning through many relationships in the great depression, this form of cosplay was required to reel men back into society after the devastation of WW2.

It largely worked and the boomer generation was born, with very high fertility rates.

Could it work again in the 2020s? Absolutely not. It's not the same time. Let's summarize why.

As boomers were born, dark clouds were already on the horizon, "second wave feminism" was in play, with the work of the homosexual feminist Simone de Beauvoir taking its toll on women's psyche who were used by the state in the workforce of WW2. The capitalist states realized they could undermine the power of the worker by forcing women into the workforce, doubling it and thus halving wages. So, masculinization of women was set in motion and the CIA got directly involved, using Gloria Steinem to promote feminism in all forms of media, even video games at one point in time!

The regime and the CIA realized the immense power it could exercise over men by spreading feminism and implementing more state control over marriage and female-male interaction. From this point on, there was a full commitment into destroying the male-female relationship and replacing it with a relationship with the state:

- Servitude to the state for men, who are provided resources.
- Complete power for women from the state, who are provisioned the roles formerly belonging to their husbands, including financial execution of the latter.

The degeneracy of the Woodstock Music and Arts Fair of 1969 resulting in the "sexual revolution" was another key victory for the state, which eventually eliminated almost all available virgin women. Virginity upon marriage is the ultimate and one-time form of submission which was the cornerstone of all marriages, alongside the lifelong commitment it entailed.

What truly sealed the fate of society was the combination (and escalation) of all these factors and the escalation of no-fault divorce and the family court system which is designed to further destroy men and render them slaves through massively unfair alimony and child support payments.

Research conducted by the institute of family studies has shown that the rate of divorce increases with the number of acts of fornication, with virginity being the safest marriage for men. The majority of men will not expend time with women they do not intend to remain with. It's a huge effort overall and creates a massive heart ache should it fail. As such, with the statistics so skewed, intelligent and street wise men are avoiding non-virgins for marriage. The rest are avoiding women with a "high body count".

The problem is the majority of women in the west lose their virginity around the age of 14 -- and society has largely demonized the concept of virginity and encouraged women to engage in as much sexual activity during their youth as possible. In general, the older the woman, the more sexual activity she has been through. Younger women have a lot of choices and are still extremely desirable but are small in number due to collapsing birth rates!

Due to the explosion in dating apps and the destruction of meeting places in real life, as well as the healthy society attached to them, these young women are more likely to be shared by a few men (less than 5% of society), meaning the majority of men will grow older without ever having the women they desire at their prime. Statistics show a catastrophic rise indicating this also:

As such, these desirable younger women are unlikely to engage in the tradwife or born again virgin cosplay.

Only older women do! These haggard (aka "post-wall") women of the west try to counter this dynamic by shaming men into marrying them. They created a meme called the "age gap" which is taken as a moral sin by liberals already (it's of course complete feminist nonsense, but this is side point.) They are of course at an age that makes them extremely undesirable for creation of a family -- but some men would gladly use them for temporary highly sinful vices.

This doesn't help the state -- they need men to commit to these women, create a family and have a stake in society that they will maintain either through divorce servitude or continued service in the economy and later as soldiers in the battlefield.

So, rather than change the workplace dynamics of women, no-fault divorce, feminism and more, they want to change the behaviour of men. They want to change what men desire. In fact, the Australian regime recently opened an entire department to do so, which I will mention soon!

What they want in men is what they achieved in women through feminism: Homosexuality. They want to create the kind of man that would accept their large swathes of born again virgins and "tradwives" and they intend to do this through intense homosexual psychological operations.

And I'm going to explain exactly what they want to turn you into: a gay cuckold.

[One aside here is the state does not realise the irreversible damage caused by their system on young men who live their teenage years, 20s and sometimes most of their 30s without a woman. They seriously think cosplay and memes can reel them in -- this is insanity. Yet it must be countered for even a small percentage of useful idiots can resuscitate the state long enough for one last war.]

I suppose its important to justify the homosexual nature of feminism and also modern marriage. Males and females have different traits and purposes for each other, and when they are mentally and physically healthy, fit like a glove and hand forged in heaven.

When one or both of them are mentally unhealth in a particular way, there is no way the hand will fit the glove.

Feminism is a kind of misnomer for what we're dealing with here, it's actually masculinisation of women, i.e. turning women into men in mind, lifestyle, goals and actions. For all intents and purposes, the great majority of western women are homosexual in this respect. They know something is wrong, as their desires contradict their conditioning -- i.e.

ego-dystonic -- but their conditioning is impossible to escape.

A woman (and today, most liberal men) recoil when they read the following word:

Submission.

To men and women, this is akin to r*pe! The most shameful thing, where consent is everything. Especially in marriage due to spatial rape laws introduced around the world by feminists.

It's so shameful to submit isn't it? Imagine being a man and submitting to another man. Actually we do it all the time. When there is a man we love and respect, we will submit to his orders and trust him with our lives -- that is what we do all the time at work, and in war. But brotherly/fatherly love between men here is key -- and is not homosexual. Submission is the cornerstone of our hierarchical societies.

Ironically, women also must submit to the state and their employers but have been conditioned to see submission to the man they supposedly love as shameful, even psychotic/sadistic.

Submission must only be an act, a kind of sardonic foreplay -- purely for the woman's own pleasure. This tends to degenerate where women desire submission from their men, lose all attraction to them when their true nature kicks out the dissonance, and breaks the relationship. You see this the moment when women force their men into extremely feminine roles. A homosexual act by the man, who has submitted to not only his wife, but the state that empowers (thus controls) her.

In my state in Australia (NSW), feminists have managed to pass an even more radical law: measures against coercive control. This is an extremely ambiguous crime that is defined as any kind of coercive behavior to control a woman in a relationship. This includes, but is not limited to, giving your wife the stink eye for getting pregnant with another man's child. You can be imprisoned if the mere stare into your woman's eye is enough to make her feel you're being coercive. You are to exercise no control, she is never to submit to you. Only the state -- and her employer, along with the small percentage of men who are beyond control and the law.

This is in addition to the previous move to assign a ministry to change men's behaviour. This is also known as brainwashing.

These are extreme examples but they demonstrate the underlying goal -- the state is the only husband of the wife, along with men above the law. You, the "husband", are essentially a cuckold. This is an extremely homosexual kink, but the majority of married men are coerced into it. They usually settled -- and eventually their wives lost respect for them (because they married a rat like her) -- and divorced them.

I mean if you're a man, put yourself in the position of a woman. Imagine signing a contract that gives the woman the power to financially execute you, control you through it, while she was already spoken for by 10 other men before you.

[I would share the relevant meme here but I find the image distasteful. I think you know what I'm talking about, with the man in the line holding flowers while an army of men have sex with his future wife.]

What they want isn't the wifejak -- she's just what they project and normalise cringy/vapid and controlling female behaviour that hen-pecked husbands tolerate. What they want to create is the wifeguy:

New Parliamentary Secretary for Men's Behaviour Change appointed in Victoria

28 May 2024

NTV welcomes the appointment in Victoria of Tim Richardson as Parliamentary Secretary for Men's Behaviour Change.

This is the first position of its kind in Australia and will focus largely on boys' and men's attitudes towards women and building respectful relationships.

Isn't it noteable how the wife guy is actually the feels guy from the beginning -- filled with melancholy while wifejak is a sociopathic (homosexual/lesbian) he is forced to obey and placate -- lest she divorces him immediately. [Ah, but of course, the divorce will come in time precisely because he obeys and tolerates her behavior. 😆]

Is everyone participating in this meme part of the PSYOP? Of course not. But key seeders and astroturf/spammers certainly are.

They want to socially normalize all the bad behaviours of women and have stupid hen pecked men advertise them as somehow desirable or endearing. Which they certainly are not as even Richard Spencer noted.

Breaking down the PSYOP, it has two parts:

1. Give the impression that this is a normal behaviour that should not only be tolerated but celebrated.
2. Encroach on existing memes and meme structures, including even anime and transmit this idea through them just via the sociopathic wifejak's presence.

[The latter is ironically the manifestation of the meme involving globohomo brainwashing the tomboy into a lesbian.]

By invading the memespace with this monstrous creation, along with the psychological Markov chain [see https://doi.org/10.3389/fpsyg.2023.1162655 for more details] it forms in the viewer and potential future meme creators, they hope to eradicate the real male desire, for submissive, intelligent, loyal, beautiful, pure and fun women -- replacing that with a feeling of ego-dystopia. Being ashamed of wanting this waifu instead of the wifeslop:

You see, they're up against a large corpus of non-existent women which these men, largely abandoned by society have grown up with and are unironically emotionally attached to: Waifus and their stories. Anime is simply a more powerful form of a meme, a multimedia simulation of a world desired by its author.

It has a key distinction from the filth produced by a camera: It removes the flawed human actors and replaces them with the hand drawn idealisations of a human being. The same people who would mock us for watching anime and connecting with the characters... burn bridges to defend the wifejak meme. Is this truly mature behavior? Of course not.

Maturity is admitting what you really desire. It is overcoming the ego-dystonic state your abuser (in this case the state, with its full brainwash apparatus) has done to you. It's putting that aside and self-actualizing. Creating artwork, like anime, depicting what you want and allowing it to manifest in the real world. It's waging physical war when necessary to do so. It's sacrificing everything for something that does not yet exist rather than settling for something that will destroy you out of cowardice.

But of course, this is my way of waging war against the meme -- by attacking the center of gravity. The image board users, and eventually the groypers see this meme as merely irritant. Their method of dealing with it... is destroying the wifejak in art, sometimes by really distasteful drawn expression.

There's nothing particularly wrong with this. It makes people either laugh or feel enraged -- meaning the artist is empathetic with the viewer, even if in an adversarial manner.

No matter what you think of these memes, you will surely agree that brainwashing men is far more psychopathic than the depicted artwork.

Furthermore, burning bridges with people because they don't want to get into cuckold relationship between the state, a hundred eligible men and a masculine wife -- does not make one gay. It makes you a man.

I can safely say that this meme blew up on the regime and actually caused the right to shatter. This is a very good thing, we have separated the wheat from the chaff. The cuckold ... I mean, wifeguy defenders are essentially screaming at groypers for "kink shaming" their modern marriage, which is actually homosexual in nature.

That's extremely funny to me, I saw it right away, but I knew that it sounded ridiculous on the surface. But look how ridiculous a time we live in today.

A wife or even a cohabitating woman can destroy your finances forever.
You are one martial rape accusation away from having your life and potentially freedom destroyed.
In Australia, cuckoldry is now mandatory.
Most married men settle for women who have been with more men than professional hookers!

Is this not hilarious? Well consider this: Remember how funny it was to watch Will Smith slap Chris Rock for insulting his wife?

What Will Smith was suffering was cuckold rage. This is because his wife, who had been with countless men before him, cried when she married with him because of the prospect of not sleeping with other men, only to eventually sleep with other men.

What Will Smith, a wifeguy, was angry about wasn't Chris Rock, but himself. He was angry at himself for accepting cuckoldry and lashed out at the man who made it widely known. It's a very homosexual ego-dystopic response!

And this is exactly why wifeguys are coming after Nick Fuentes. They hate him for destroying their honour!

Yet why is the state now coming after Nick Fuentes with a projection (a gay allegation -- when the wifejak meme is essentially homosexual)? Well, here we enter the conclusion. Their objective and likely next moves.

To put it lightly, the state is in deep sh*t.
The war against Russia is turning into a nuclear war.
The war against Iran is not only an unpopular, it's exceedingly becoming impossible due to the deindustrialized state.

The Manchurian state needs its men back long enough to resolve these issues and then finally purge them from existence.

They are so greedy though, that rather than roll back feminism, they want us to accept it and even desire it. They want to make bad and vapid female behavior seem endearing. Ironically, such displays from men will not fool men, but women, who will think this behavior is not only tolerable but desirable.

These women will then think that men who don't like it are somehow freaks. The truth is, it's the married men who are abnormal. They are a minority of men -- as are men desiring relationships and men who have ever been in a relationship.

The battle is over, they won their war on men and captured all the women. But in winning this battle, the state has lost the war.

In a sense, the state is like the cuckold husband and Will Smith, except instead of a cheating unfaithful wife, what they have are armies upon armies of disloyal men -- refusing to love and obey the state. Refusing to submit to the state.

We, free men, want something else. Something this state, and the women it has created, cannot offer us. The memes are amusing, and they're powerful forms of behavioural/societal modification. Ultimately though, there is a physical war that will need to be won -- after the state completely collapses.

This is inevitable and the state going after Nick Fuentes with this gay claim, when essentially every single married man is in a homosexual relationship with his "wife" and the state, is extremely petty.

It's already over my dear glowies. You know I love you guys but you need to understand that you've lost to a self-inflicted wound. It's impossible to roll back feminism now. That's going to be your real problem, you're barking on the wrong tree. Maybe, if you listened to us during GamerGate, things could have been different. Ten years have passed and we've entered the event horizon into the unknown.

You cannot compel people to want something they do not desire once they've passed a certain age. The fertility collapse is deep and generation alpha is essentially cancelled or contained only within extremely conservative families out of the reach of your brainwashing.

Do the math and you'll see I'm right. Perhaps you should give up and join us instead? Submit to us and maybe we'll think of a way to salvage the situation -- after the collapse has happened. We're not stupid, lol. We are real men, not cuckolded wifeguys. 😉

I hope this has been helpful and has given you insight into what is going on. It was certainly a heavily read I am sure, but if you're left with more questions than answers, feel free to contact me on @cirnosad at my favourite site in the world, Twitter!
