Tr

Korobochka (コロボ) 🇦🇺✝️ @cirnosad

Jul 2, 2025 · 3 tweets · cirnosad/status/1940283897474101347

I'm going to front load the discussion a little bit: You can ignore this post, nothing I write will depend on it. It's a reflection and a prediction.

The words of Jesus are not merely a matter of faith, but a heuristic that is essential. You only realise this after straying from it. You return to it on your own, and only upon reflection, understand what he meant.

Even the text that strays from it within the gospel itself shows its flaw. The red letters of Jesus are the truth and reason.

This disturbs the modern thinker who only sees the world through correct deconstruction of all the OT lies of the "fathers" (like an unmovable Earth) and other nonsense. But none of them even try to confront the words of Jesus, primarily because they cannot understand them. For these words to survive, Jesus knew it had to be placed in what would inevitably be an encrusted system of power/control. Everything placed upon them directs people to recreate the temple in stone, rather than the true temple in body. They nullify everything he said, redirecting them to essentially the Jewish faith with upgrades. The pattern is always the same: those who actually follow the red letters threaten the temple-builders' power, so they must be eliminated.

Anyone who tries to deviate from this folly is automatically grouped/pigeonholed into previous groups state-enforced Christianity destroyed. Of the genocides these people carried out, only the Cathar genocide remains with us -- 1 million people murdered for their beliefs. Many choosing to end their own lives rather than become slaves of Yahweh. The only history we know about them is the one chosen for them by their murderers.

There is only one truth though, and the harder to attempt to hide it, the more material you generate in opposition to it, ultimately leading people back to it. This is why the void always loses, it cannot exist without a real. It always defeats itself, and this is why the Judeosatanic peoples and those like them will always face defeat -- it is weaved into the very fabric of reality itself.

Today, humanity is under attack from the adherents of the void. They see the majority of us as future farm animals. Without teleology, serving their own ret*rded "higher purpose" rather than our own -- God's. No matter what your beliefs are, I am almost certain that when you put all of reality together, and remove every single lie, it will return you to one single truth: The true meanings behind Jesus Christ's parables and sayings. This is why they work so tirelessly to obscure it, because a population that understands these truths cannot be enslaved.

The follies of the past though is to turn these sayings inwards, or to look towards the future and wait for a saviour, when the saviour was never one person but all of us enjoined together as one.

Except the fallen* of course. That much should be obvious right? XD

And no this isn't going to be some Kumbaya muh lord BS, it's going to be WAR with the adherents of the void.

• • •